51       What's 75 million years old and brand spanking new? A teenage Utahceratops! Come to the 52         Saroyan, armed with your best dinosaur roar, when Scott Sampson, Research Curator at the 53         Utah Museum of Natural History, steps to the podium. Sampson's research has focused on the 54         ecology and evolution of late Cretaceous dinosaurs and he has conducted fieldwork in a number
55         of countries in Africa.
56       Scott Sampson is a Canadian-born paleontologist who received his Ph.D. in zoology from the 57         University of Toronto. His doctoral work focused on two new species of ceratopsids (horned 58         dinosaurs) from the Late Cretaceous of Montana, as well as the growth and function of ceratopsid
59         horns and frills.
60       Following graduation in 1993, Sampson spent a year working at the American Museum of Natural 61         History in New York City, followed by five years as assistant professor of anatomy at the New 62         York College of Osteopathic Medicine on Long Island. He arrived at the University of Utah
63         accepting a dual position as assistant professor in the Department of Geology and Geophysics
64         and curator of vertebrate paleontology at the Utah Museum of Natural History. His research 65         interests largely revolve around the phylogenetics, functional morphology, and evolution of 66         Late Cretaceous dinosaurs.
67       In addition to his museum and laboratory-based studies, Sampson has conducted paleontological

68 work in Zimbabwe, South Africa, and Madagascar, as well as the United States and Canada. He was 69 also the on-air host for the Discovery Channel's Dinosaur Planet and recently completed a book, 70 Dinosaur Odyssey: Fossil Threads in the Web of Life, which is one of the most 71 comprehensive surveys of dinosaurs and their worlds to date.
