III. 1 What did you like about the class?

I especially enjoyed the coding portion, as well as how engaging the professor was.
The powerpoint demonstrations and website updates each class.
Learning new methods in web design
Good coverage of the material, enjoyed the active class.
My professor was very good. He a lot of knowledge of what he was teaching and was able to articulate it just as well.
Engaging instruction. Broad coverage of topics current to the industry.
Everything including the Donuts on Saturday!
The topics covered and the website we did.
The class notes and professor's course website were excellent
Carl Burnett is a very good instructor. He asks many topic-related questions of the students as he lectures and keeps the interest level high. I also enjoyed the format of the textbook, in which the practical exercises build upon one another.

III. 2 What didn't you like about the class?

N/A
Dreamweaver being used instead of a free web development tool.
A little difficult for the not so advanced, beginner, and intermediate.
sometimes hard to keep up with following your code and typing it in fast enough to keep up.
Way too long.
Too many topics to cover for time allotted.
Everything was fine.
Nothing to complain about.
Too much in-class information in short span of time
The pace of the course was rushed, due to the amount of material being covered in the five sessions.

III. 3 What improvements would you suggest?

N/A
It's a lot of content. It could use a couple more class sessions.
More time allocated for designing and coding the website.
It's good.
Less focus on reviewing terminology.
Maybe an extra meeting session, from 5 to 6.
none.
More time for in-class exercises
The class is much too short for the complexity and amount of material being covered. Rather than five sessions, I would recommend changing the course duration to 10 or even 12 sessions.

III. 4 What other classes would you like to see offered?

N/A XML
Anything computer related
Showing different types of formatting of the website. Something like parallax scroll or hero images.
Restful API development.
Any classes about web design, programming, and maybe some about computer engineering.
The class on Infographics should be offered which was cancelled for the Summer 2017 semester
WordPress website development, Drupal website development, Introduction to the SASS preprocessor
